We confirmed the validity of these QI measures using evidence-based criteria, including CAGs, previous quantitative studies, and systematic reviews of effectiveness \[[@CR35]\]. These criteria identified the initial QI checklists as valid measures of processes and outcomes. The QI checklists with measures of processes and outcomes were then revised and ready for use in clinical trials. We used a qualitative research design to develop a new QI measure for the pharmacists' role in the community medication program. The primary aim of the study was to develop a QI measure of implementation. Accordingly, we used TDF and PRECEDE measures to develop the QI checklist for the clinical trials. To our knowledge, this is the first study that developed a QI measure for the community medication program. Recently, we developed a QI checklist for the medication reconciliation process, which included some differences from the community medication process. We used the QI checklist to develop a QI measure for the first time in a clinical trial. The QI measure for the community medication program was found to be suitable for implementation in a clinical trial and is currently included in the clinical trial. The results of this study may not be generalizable to community pharmacies with different medicine services and environments. However, because the QI measures included in this study were based on scientific evidence, our study findings may be useful for medication safety in the community pharmacy. Conclusion {#Sec17} ========== In this study, we developed a QI measure of the role of pharmacists in the community medication program
