MediaFlyout is an application that would sooner be categorized as a widget. This Taskbar program was created in order to make it easier for individuals to keep track of their played media files. Whether it's in a browser or a proprietary Windows application, this small program will display it together with minimal controls for quick stop or play actions. Modern and useful Now unless you avoid playing media files on your machine, something that is rarely true for any computer user, this application will definitely come in handy, especially in times when you can't figure out where you've got media files playing, and don't care either, but need to pause them. It's also great if you need to hear or view more files at once or one after the other. The bottom line with this media manager is the fact that it gives the user fast and easy control over basic run and stop functionality for players. Some helpful features Although it might not seem like it, this program includes a couple of features that make it even more interesting. Firstly, the tray menu that launches once the app icon is clicked will adapt to whatever taskbar theme and color shade you've applied to it. Double-clicking on the icon will pause all media or play whatever has been already paused in the list. Lastly, the app's looks are consistent with the design features of modern operating systems, meaning rounded corners and transparency features, depending on the OS. MediaFlyout is a helpful program, even if it only looks like a widget. Aside from this aspect, the app is also stylish and fits well with the rest of your desktop environment, of course, provided you have upgraded to a more recent OS. If you're constantly listening to more than one media source, make sure you grab this app to gain even more control over specific files. The singer worked with Sondheim on his 1973 musical Sunday in the Park With George. US playwright Terrence McNally, who won an Academy Award for his 1987 film A View From The Bridge and wrote the 1993 film Atlantic City, has died. McNally, 75, who worked with Sondheim on his 1973 musical Sunday in the Park With George, died at his home in New York City on Sunday after a long illness. His agent Rick Carnes said: "We are deeply saddened by the loss of our dear friend, collaborator and teacher." McNally won the Tony for best play for Corpus Christi in 1969, for the play Fools in a barn in 1973, for Best Revival of a play for A View from the Bridge at the 1987 Tony Awards and was nominated for Best Adapted Screenplay at the 1993 Academy Awards for the same film. McNally's other play credits include The Lisbon Traviata (winner of the 2003 Tony Award for Best Revival), Masterclass (nominated for the 2008 Tony Award for Best Revival) and Passion. Most recently, he wrote the play Speed-the-Plow for the 2016 Broadway revival of Pinter's The Dumb Waiter (of which McNally wrote the music and lyrics), directed by Sam Gold. It was also nominated for the 2017 Tony for Best Revival of a Play, though didn't ultimately win. The play was revived in 2013 and 2016 at the Brooklyn Academy of Music. McNally's writing partner, James Lapine, won Best Revival of a Play for the 2014 revival of Cabaret
