Automation of 2D Drafting in AutoCAD 2017 Release: AutoCAD 2017 includes the ability to create, edit, and print 2D drawings using a linked assembly and the AutoLISP programming language. Linked Assembly: AutoCAD 2017 creates and edits 2D drawings based on the shapes, styles, and dimensions of linked assemblies, without requiring manual assembly. AutoLISP: AutoCAD 2017 includes an optional, automated scripting language, AutoLISP, for editing 2D drawings. The AutoLISP language is similar to the JavaScript programming language. Installed and On Demand Services: New in AutoCAD 2017, this feature allows users to install and unload On Demand services to have them at their fingertips. On Demand services also allow users to load and use file formats that are not available in the client platform or in other software tools. Disassembly: In AutoCAD 2017, it is possible to compare two documents in the context of their assembly history. Makino cv. Hei-shimidori) under salt stress. Effect of cinnamic acid (CIN) on growth, photosynthetic pigments, and antioxidant enzymes in pak choi (Brassica chinensis L. var. chinensis (S. et Z.) Makino cv. Hei-shimidori) under salt stress was studied in this paper. It showed that NaCl treatment significantly decreased the weight of roots and shoots, which was significantly promoted by CIN. NaCl treatment significantly inhibited the chlorophyll a, chlorophyll b, and total chlorophyll contents of the leaves, and remarkably decreased the carotenoid contents of the leaves. CIN could increase the chlorophyll a, chlorophyll b, and total chlorophyll contents, and increase the carotenoid contents of the leaves in pak choi. Salt stress led

This article explores how women, and particularly first time mothers, in poststructuralist theory and social and cultural critique negotiate childbirth and motherhood in their everyday lives. Using data from in-depth interviews with first-time mothers in London, England, who were interviewed after their births, the article suggests that maternity and the postpartum period is characterized by a kind of "paradoxical, liminal state" that is both traumatic and healing. The article argues that first time mothers, when faced with the challenge of negotiating labor and birth, can both receive support and distance themselves from a provider culture. It also suggests that the matrix of maternity, childbirth, and motherhood is not static, but changes and re-forms through the interaction of a range of sociocultural factors and for those involved in the institution of childbirth and motherhood. In particular, it argues that motherhood and childbirth are mediated and shaped by the conditions of employment and by social class. The article argues that these gendered and socialized conditions create a landscape of opportunities and limitations that individual mothers must negotiate to secure either a well-worked place at the table or a marginal position.Introduction to the special issue on toxicity and evaluation of acellular pertussis vaccines: what is the evidence? Acellular pertussis vaccines are increasingly used worldwide. We present an overview of the state of evidence on acellular pertussis vaccines and their constituents, including a focus on recent advances in understanding their mechanisms of action and immune responses, safety, and efficacy.
