- "I don't do VR" VR demo, game in early stage. So if you are one of those people who don't get VR and are confused on what VR is all about, you can watch this on youtube, with the description that the demos is purely to show potential developers what's the "VR bandwagon" and how to develop for VR. Video description: Rollercoaster VR Universe is an early access virtual reality game being developed by my company, d3cteriums. It is an endless climbing, roller-coaster style game being built upon the Unreal Engine 4. The game is still a work in progress, but we hope to release an Early Access version for VR users that will be compatible with most devices and hardware. We also plan to release a PC version of the game without VR compatibility. We are still adding new rides and features to the game and have started work on the Z-axis. We plan to have many different game modes including a 2D mode for those that don't like VR or might want to play the game in 2D. Our game is designed to be enjoyed with an Oculus Rift VR headset, Playstation VR, HTC Vive VR or simply a Playstation 4 for VR support. For a single person VR experience we suggest the Oculus Rift which is currently the best VR headset. Other headsets have some advantages but not many. Developing a game for VR is very different from just making an ordinary game. Our game is all about interaction, so the more realistic the movements are, the better. However, with VR you need to get creative because we are creating the first in-game physics engine for VR. Engine Features: - Physically Based Rendering - Multiple layers in the same world - Texturing - Physics - Procedural Baking - Multiple trigger locations - Single and multi-user VR support - Oculus Rift / Vive VR - Headtracking support on Oculus Rift - Move support on Oculus Rift - Touch support on Oculus Rift - PS4 PS VR - Single-user - Multi-user So far we have: - Buildings - Walls - Ladders - On/Off VR switches - Text - Text on floor - Monster spawns - Health system - Monsters - Stairs - Multiple rides - Lighting effects - Weather effects - VR

What's new:

' Network The Nature Defenders' Network (NDN) is a US non-profit environmental organisation, which works globally on issues related to environmental conservation, protection, restoration, and sustainable development. They are principally involved with the conservation, recovery and restoration of culturally significant and threatened ecosystems. Partnerships with indigenous and local communities, as well as with scientists, government agencies, and funding bodies, are also central to this task. The NDN is a member organization of the Conservation International (CI). History Formerly a joint membership venture between the National Wildlife Federation and The Nature Conservancy, the Nature Defenders' Network was re-branded in 2012 as an independent international environmental organization. During this transition, the individual staff and management of the NDF were renumbered and rebranded as individual branches around the world. Objectives The Nature Defenders' Network's non-profit, international membership organization, has a special interest in sites with great cultural and biodiversity heritage value. It emphasises the importance of working with local people to conserve, grow and sustain vital ancient and modern ecosystems. The Network is also concerned with promoting sustainable ecosystems through maximising their value, especially in areas of high biodiversity. Mission statement Nature & People Nature is all-encompassing, a part of us, an entity to be revered. But, it is also under threat to such a degree that its well-being and the well-being of all humanity are dependent upon it. The human race relies upon nature to support its lifestyle, to feed its people and to sustain its environment. Furthermore, the events that occur in the natural world shape, and sometimes determine, the development of human society. Notwithstanding, the sum of human activity (industrial and agricultural in the first instance) is placing ever more pressure upon and destroying the natural world. Take for example, the nitrogen and phosphorous run-off, caused by the agricultural industry. Through putrefaction, much of this nitrogen and phosphorous is returned to the water, sea and land, and this is coupled with the destruction of many species that are natural custodians of fertile land. Humans need the natural world, but the natural world needs humans! Formed in 2011 with the aim of restoring a sustainable relationship between humans and nature, the NDN is a non-profit partnership between locally based conservation- and indigenous-led groups in America, Asia, Australia, Europe and Latin America. Modified Speed Master is an arcade racing game with fast paced, tight controls, and a focus on speed and skill. The original goal of the game was to create a game that can be picked up and played by anyone no matter their age, without having to read manuals or tutorials. The essence of the game is that anyone can start and play, but real seasoned gamers can challenge themselves with the daily, weekly and high score challenges. The game is also designed to require two players at most, but four controllers can be used to play with up to four friends. There are different game modes: Practice, Arcade, Championship and Split Screen. A playground of play for all ages. This game was made after I realized the need for a racing game that has tight and agile controls, and is fun to play. I did not limit my creation to one genre, like most racing games, but rather used whatever was needed to create something different and exciting. If you want to download the full game, go to the link below: Hopefully this will give you more insight to this, and more games like this. I appreciate all feedback, anything that can help me improve will be greatly appreciated. Thanks! A: You really like detail. In one scene you have some tiny picture of a spartan on the page, indicating a sci-fi setting. In another you have a bus, indicating a post-apocalyptic setting. If you don't need to write explicit details about the setting, it's fine. But if you do need to write about a specific thing about a setting, you should pick a representative example and over-explain the thing. Like, take the word cup in this example, what does it mean to you? Is the cup yours? A private thing? It's just for drinks? Is a social gathering required to have a cup? Maybe the softians, a costumed society, have special cups to drink from. On the other hand, maybe you can just add this one extra line, and the user can make their own choice of what kind of cup it is. Add a note on the page explaining what the meaning of the cup means. If you do
