modern age is a brief consideration of how the modern era can still be seen as a particular period of modern history, one of the most modern ages to exist, where means and means of communication hold more weight than we can easily find in any other past period in history. The specific idea behind this essay is to see how the modern age can still be seen as an era of modernity, one of the modern ages in modern history, and what characteristics would make us put it into the modern era. The more general idea behind this overall scope of this essay is to see how it is still possible to still refer to an era as "modern" and still see the attributes of the modern age as meaning anything particularly modern. To see what can still be taken from this to use as a modern or modern age is to notice that this era of modernity

has a few characteristics that are not found in any of the preceding eras in modern history. While "modern" has many meanings ranging from simply "modern-looking" to the "accepted and favored" of that era, the modern era has many characteristics that are not found in any of the other periods of modern history. I will explain some of these characteristics to allow the modern age to be used for this purpose. These characteristics are: 1. The text is written using fonts and font sizes that are computer generated and could be original to the era and could not be used in any other period of modern history. 2. Graphical images are seen and made as computer generated graphics, and could be original to the era and could not be used in any other period of modern history. 3. The documents in the era are written in a style that is computer generated. 4. There is a lack of hand writing in the era.
