What's new in Fifa 22:

- HyperMotion Technology (HMX), which leverages player motion data collected during a complete high intensity football match, two days later in life-like suits, and use this data to make your gameplay more authentic. To activate this in the FIFA roster, you'll see a Motion Capture button inside EA SPORTS Football, and on the Guide menu when you're on the Squad.
- Dynamic, Online Optimization with FT, Offline Optimization. Local squad and player sensitivity for offline can now be tuned.
- Goalkeeper, Long Shot. Long Shot now available via a kick or short pass from a teammate when you have the ball in order to clear a better shooting angle.
- Player Points Rework. We've undergone a major rework to the way we calculate player points for the FIFA Ultimate Team cards. Every card now has win odds you can actually calculate, plus bonuses and unsimulated factors are factored into the chances you'll earn these cards. We've also created new UI that makes it easier to tell how much a card is worth, so you can know if a card is worth the investment. It's also important to keep in mind that the odds are going to vary a great deal depending on how competitive you are playing for your Ultimate Team.
- Cards. There are a ton of changes in this update based on player feedback, including opportunities to attach a card to a single player, or multiple cards to a single player. One of the best success stories we heard about how a card enhanced a player's game was from one of the founders of the The EA TEAM World Manager community, who told us that one of the players who picked up the card they created got their soccer dream job working for the US Soccer Federation
