Photoshop is often thought of as a bitmap editor, but it can also be used for vector images. While Photoshop is one of the most used programs for editing images today, it's origins go back more than 25 years when its name was just Photoshop from Quark and 2D software from Digital Painting (DP). Early history of Photoshop Lutz Prechelt was the main developer of Photoshop from 1980 to 1989, and the product was named from the acronym for "photography, illustration, and typesetting." The 1.0 version was released on June 12, 1989 for $1,995 (about $9,125 in today's dollars), and the price was reduced to $695 by 1991. Its first version had only a rudimentary undo capability. Its 1.0 version didn't include any layers, the ability to stack images, or adjustments. And it was also missing the ability to edit and combine images using blend modes. The earliest version of Photoshop is available for free on Adobe's website. In 1992, Photoshop 1.1 was released, and it cost $795 ($3,800 in today's dollars). It was the first version of Photoshop that was available to use on a personal computer, but it still didn't have layers and adjustments. With version 1.5, the first layer system was released in 1993. In 1995, version 1.0 was replaced with version 2.5, adding the ability to combine and split layers. It also introduced the hand tool. Version 3.0 in 1996 was the first version that could do rotoscoping. Version 3.5 in 1997 introduced textured layers, blend modes, and animated GIF support. Photoshop 3.5 was added to the Mac platform in 1999, and version 3.5.1 for the Mac added the ability to use a custom menu bar. Version 3.5.2 was released in 2001, and included the ability to edit 16-bit bitmaps on the Mac. It also dropped the requirement for any action for the layer to be editable. It was renamed Photoshop 3.5 in 2002 and was released as the final version of the main flagship software. Version 5.0 was released in 2004 with many new features. Version 6.0 in 2008 added the ability to process and edit text on the web, the Hand tool, and improved channel selection. Its first update for the Mac platform was released in 2009, and it was

Q: How to show home screen as a Landscape view for a TabActivity Right now, in my Android App I have a TabActivity where a Fragment is opened after a button is pressed. Inside the Fragment there is a Map and a Button. I'd like to be able to show the home screen as a landscape view so when the home screen is displayed, the full page will be shown in landscape view, so all the map will be displayed on one horizontal line and the button will be on the other horizontal line. Does anyone have a good example of doing that or know how to do that? Thank you for your time! A: To make your home screen landscape, check your layouts.xml, and change the orientation to "landscape". Like this : If you're doing this in a Fragment you could just set the rotation to that mode : @Override public void onActivityCreated(Bundle savedInstanceState) { super.onActivityCreated(savedInstanceState); setReq uestedOrientation(ActivityInfo.SCREEN_ORIENTA TION_LANDSCAPE); } If you're doing this in a TabActivity you could just do it in its AndroidManifest : Note: You'll also need the android .permission.RECEIVE_BOOT_COMPLETED permission. EDIT: Since what I've been explaining doesn't answer the second part of the question, I'm re-posting it. To move the map and the button, you should have a new LinearLayout (or RelativeLayout) to put your Fragment (with its Map and Button) in, and use its layout with
