Story PDF.Kilmeaden Kilmeaden (. meaning "King's Bay") is a village on the north shore of Lough Mask, County Mayo, Ireland. It is near the town of Ballinrobe. History Kilmeaden was historically a seaport, situated just across the mouth of Lough Mask from Ballinrobe. This required crossing a series of stepping stones, each of which has a different local name. Each of the names relates to a St. Patrick, where Kilmeaden is named after Patrick I, the original patron saint of the church. Kilmeaden is quite close to the M7 motorway, requiring vehicles from Ballinrobe to travel around five miles on a roundabout if they wish to pass through the village. Kilmeaden's church is the Roman Catholic Church of St. Patrick. Kilmeaden's original church is located beside the current church, which was built at the turn of the 19th and 20th centuries. Its original church was built in the 1700s and had a 6d1f23a050
