punjabi is a language that is the result of the fusion of various linguistic elements. it is a unique combination of sanskrit, persian, the language of the invaders, hindi and the local languages. today, a great many of the people of this region speak hindi. however, this does not mean that punjabi has died out. the punjabi language is and always will be the language of the common people, the language of the peasants, the language of the poor, the language of the landed gentry and the language of the elite of the region. the most famous of all these is the parmashwar panth. the five gurus form the five paryas of the panch parameshwar. the first guru to receive the message was guru amar das. it was then handed on to guru ram das who told it to guru arjan dev. the text of the parmashwar panth is written in the guru granth sahib. but the text in sri guru granth sahib is written in the akhaal-punjabi dialect of the punjabi language, which is the most popular dialect of the state of punjab. the parmashwar panth comprises the first five gurus and their principles. the word: bawan (35) means 35 in hindi and punjabi. it is also called haan, khar (forty). it is said that the same name was given to the first letter of the alphabet in that language. it is said to be true that 35 letters are the basic building blocks of the 23-letter devanagari script. gurmukh means guru, and akhri means a writing. therefore the word akhri means guru written or written script. the word bawan akhri means guru written or written script. it is a bani, or part of a manuscript. it also means a manuscript of bawan. these writings are used to teach the sacred language of the aryan, sanskrit. the sacred writings of the aryan known as veda. in fact it is a grammar of sanskrit as the language of the aryans and the brahmins. therefore the word bawan akhri literally means a grammar of sanskrit as the language of the aryans and the brahmins.
