There are many ways you can get the mod, the two main ways you can get the mod are via the Diablo 2 website, or via the mod's website. You can make a full backup of the game before you load the mod by going to on the pause screen, making sure to press X first. You can also use stand in. If you have it, you can press the Spacebar at the pause screen to teleport back home. If you aren't sure how to teleport back home, here is a video tutorial I made, of the game. You can see how to teleport back home in the video tutorial here: My experience of playing the mod is this. I know people will think its impossible for it to work, but its easy. When I first started playing the mod I had no clue what I was doing and it wasn't until I realized I didn't have to level my character again and again, that I realized how great it was. At the beginning I did get lagged but I set it down to a minimum, so I didn't have that problem any more. Diablo 2: Resurrected is going to be released at the end of the year, so we will hopefully see a few changes to some of the game's features, and that would be good. Alongside various tweaks to items and skills, there are also many new additions in Project Diablo 2 to help facilitate a more modern enjoyment. Firstly, over on Project Diablo 2's website is a trading page where players can list items they wish to trade away for what they need, typically for High Runes. The website features the ability to copy a message to send to the recipient in-game or directly on the website through a quick chat system. The mod also allows players to play in widescreen with the option to upscale the game to any resolution without affecting gameplay, so players can play in 4K if they have the appropriate hardware.
